LESSON 4: PROFESSIONAL DOCUMENTS/TOOLS OF WORK

4.1 Introduction

Welcome to our fourth lesson on professional documents or what is nowadays referred to as tools of work. Professional al documents or tools of work are documents used by the teacher in preparation, implementation and evaluation of learning. They are very vital to the teaching and learning process. These are the documents which are used by the teacher in the preparation, implementation and evaluation of teaching/learning process. They include the syllabus session plan, lesson plans, records of work covered and progress records. They are meant to make teaching and learning more effective. Welcome to the lesson.

4.2 Lesson learning outcomes

By the end of this lesson you should be able to:

4.2.1 Describe the different professional documents or tools of work

4.2.2 Explain the importance of professional documents or tools of work

4.2.3 Develop the various professional documents or tools of work

4.2.4 Use the various professional documents or tools of work

4.2.1 Description of tools of work

As we have discussed in the introduction, professional documents are referred to as those documents used by the teacher in preparation, implementation and evaluation of learning. They include the occupational standards, learning plan, session plan, records of work, portfolio of evidence, teaching time table, class attendance register, among others. Let us now look at each of the documents.

Occupational standards (os)

Occupational standard is a document that communicates information about an academic course or class and defines expectations and responsibilities. It is generally an overview or summary of the curriculum. Occupational standards requisite document for teaching in that it serves to outline the basic elements of a course including what topics will be covered, a weekly schedule, and a list of tests, assignments, and their associated weightings. However, occupational standards have the power to do more than that, it can articulate connections between learning outcomes, assessments, content, and pedagogical practice – that is, the way in which the course is constructively aligned – in guiding students through their learning. We consider the occupational standards here due to the way in which this document serves as a communication piece of both the practical details and the overall alignment of your course.

Learning plan

A learning plan is a document that a teacher develops from the curriculum design. It is a detailed breakdown of the occupational standards in terms of lessons, weeks, terms and year for the purpose of orderly and systematic teaching. The learning plan is derived from the occupational standards. It shows how the planned curriculum content shall be distributed within the time allocated for learning.

A learning plan helps the teacher to:

- Plan on what resources will be required.
- Decide on methodology to be used.
- Plan for assessment.

A learning plan has several components which include:

Week: This is the week of term in which a particular topic content is to be taught session: Specific Lesson in the week in which a particular topic/sub-topic is to be taught.

Topic/sub-topic: These are specific areas identified for study in the subject's occupational standards. A sub topic is a sub division of topic for ease of study.

Specific Objective: This refers to what the teacher intends to achieve by the end of the session. They must be SMART, that is: S - Specific M - Measurable A - Attainable/achievable R - Realistic T - Time bound

Objectives section

Should point to the expected change of behaviour of the learner.

Teaching/Learning Experiences section

The column clarifies the activities carried by the learner and the teacher for effective teaching and learning during and after the session. These experiences should be stated clearly using action verbs and be sequentially geared towards achieving the specific objectives. They guide the teacher to plan in advance the teaching/learning experiences, methods and the varied activities the class will be engaged in during the session.

Teaching/Learning Resources section

These spells out the instructional materials the teacher intends to use to make the session effective. They include human and material resources. The teacher should creatively select, develop and assemble resources before the session such as; text books, newspaper cuttings, charts, audio- and audio-visual materials.

References section

The teacher indicates text books, reference materials and documents which should be used to source content on specific topics. A variety of references should be used to enrich the content.

Remarks section

These are comments that the teacher makes to show whether the set objectives have been achieved.

The following is a sample of a learning plan for one week with three sessions.

Session plan

Another vital document that a teacher requires is the session plan. It is a detailed account of what is to be covered in a session. It is extracted from the learning plan. A well-planned session plan helps the teacher to:

Manage time well during the session.

Select and design appropriate assessment methods.

organize the content to be taught in advance focusing clearly on subject matter to be covered.

Components of a good session plan include introduction, session development, conclusion, summary and reflection.

Importance of session Planning

A session plan is necessary in the effective teaching because it helps the teacher to:

- focus clearly on the content to be covered and the way it should be taught thus avoiding vagueness and irrelevance
- organize the content to be taught in advance
- plan, prepare and assemble teaching/learning resources
- take the opportunity to visualize and conceptualize in advance the teaching strategies and methods.
- select and design appropriate assessment methods.

Format of a session plan

A session plan should include the following components:

- Administrative details
- Date
- Time
- Class
- Roll
- Unit of competence
- Topic/Subtopic: It is derived from learning plan

Specific Objective(s): It is a statement of what is intended to be achieved by the end of the session. It should be stated in simple clear language and should be measurable as in the unit of competence.

Learning/teaching Experiences: This column contains the approaches/methods to be used in the session. These include discussion, observation, brainstorming among many. Learning/teaching experiences should aim at achieving the stated session objectives.

Learning/teaching Resources

These are the materials that will be used to enhance the learning/teaching process. They include: charts, videos and audio programmes, pictures and real objects. Teachers should improvise resources relevant that are and appropriate to the session.

References:

This column gives the sources of information. These include textbooks, magazines, periodicals and journals.

Remarks:

The teacher should state if the lesson was taught successfully. If there were any difficulties observed, mention them. Remedies sought should also be indicated.

Portfolios of evidence

A portfolio of evidence is document kept by the teacher showing the work that has been done at the end of every session. It is a document where all details of the work covered/taught by the teacher is entered on a daily basis. A portfolio helps in:

Accountability and transparency of work covered by a teacher.

The continuity of facilitation of learning.

Providing uniformity in content coverage in case of several streams. components of record of work include time frame, work done, remarks and details of the teacher.

These tools of work are very important for effective learning. The teacher should ensure that they acquire them during the learning process.

The entries are made by the individual teacher after every session. A portfolio of evidence ensures:

- accountability and transparency of work covered by the teacher
- the continuity of teaching of a particular class
- that a new teacher traces where to start teaching a class
- the evaluation of schemes of work after a period of time for example four years
- uniformity in content coverage in case of several streams.

A portfolio of evidence should have the following components:

- Time frame: It should indicate the day, date, week and lesson
- The week and the lesson can be specified for example week 9 Lesson 1
- Work covered: it takes the form of sub-topics derived from specific objective (s)

Remarks section

This is a statement reflecting the success and failures of the session and recommendations/way forward

Name/Sign/Initials

This is the identity of the teacher who taught the session. It helps in accountability and transparency.

Class register

A class register means an official document, which may be an electronic document, in which the attendance of learners in a class is recorded each school day. Student attendance school register-keeps a daily record of which students are present in the setting and who is absent. This school register is maintained by the teacher.
